

Recap and Reflect!

Congratulations! You have not only spent time learning from your shoppers, staff and volunteers, but you've also made your site a Healthy Food Environment!

Now that you know what to do, keep a feedback loop going between your staff/volunteers and shoppers. Return to the discovery phase (found in the Creating Healthy Food Environments for Your Shoppers guide) as often as you need when a sticking point emerges. Continue to iterate, trying out new ideas - especially the small ones. Don't forget to enjoy the process and the fruits of your labor!

Let's take a moment to check where you've been and what you might have left. Below is a list of all that's been covered so far. Check off those you've completed. Make notes for where you still have work to do.

Complete Y/N	Topic	Notes
	Learned about behavioral economics and how these changes can impact your space.
	Engaged your board, staff, volunteers, and shoppers for buy in.
	Completed an observation of your current setup and functionality of space.
	Brainstorm possibilities of what behavioral economic strategy(ies) could be implemented.
	Strategized a plan to implement changes.
	Incorporate stakeholder feedback, especially shoppers.
	Implement changes.
	Have an evaluation plan.

1. Where have you landed? What is still left to do?

2. What, if any are your next steps? (What do you have left to complete?)
